DIRECTORS' NOTES

Tomasz Poplonski (The Devil and Daniel Webster): "I've learned to groan... Anyway, thank you everyone."

Sarah Maxwell (A Sunny Morning): "Okay, so I like one-act plays that take place in parks. Everyone—cast, crew, friends—thanks for making Gunn drama the best. Jim—you are the greatest, I can't thank you enough."

Assaf Cohen and Lauren Popell (Hello Out There): "Hello out there! 'Happiness makes up in height for what it lacks in length.' —Robert Frost"

Jessica Russell (Triplet): "What being a director means: Having to find condoms, a clay bust, birth control pills and a doll that looks like a Greek god, and also working with a cast that was 'perfect, absolutely perfect.'"

Toby Sterling (Aria Da Capo): "Soon to join the ranks of such great names as 'Hindenberg' and 'Titanic,' Aria Da Capo takes the drama world by storm. Edna's (master) piece has every component of high drama: comedy, tragedy, and a Christ reference. Lots of people deserve thanks, but the only ones worth mentioning are those down at SELIX, who came through with a tux. Now make like a shepherd and get the flock out of here."
